NelsonJobs.com Announces Free 45-Day Job Postings During 2009

Job Board Aims to Help Regional Businesses and Boost Economy

SONOMA, California, February 23, 2009 – NelsonJobs has announced that in keeping with its commitment to assist job applicants and employers during this difficult economic time, it will as a public service offer free 45-day job postings for the remainder of 2009. This opportunity is available to private, public and non-profit organizations located in the Bay Area.

NelsonJobs staff members are able to provide companies with expert guidance regarding job postings, such as how to most quickly attract the best candidates for a particular position. They also possess a solid understanding of talent matches, hiring practices, salary and compliance, and more.

Gary Nelson, Chairman and CEO of Nelson Family of Companies, says, "As a business, we've been a part of this community for almost 40 years. We feel that it's important to stay involved and to contribute, particularly during hard times. The free job postings are a way for Nelson to help local businesses and job candidates, which will benefit everyone."

Since most sites charge a minimum fee of $75 - $100 per posting, Nelson Jobs' free posting offer can help companies save money. Companies who choose to post with NelsonJobs receive: free, unlimited job postings with multiple category options; a client services team that manages job postings from start to finish; a review of job posts and screening questions to ensure HR compliance; Google tracking; and a profile of their company.

Interested parties should contact Alexis Enriquez at NelsonJobs via email. Her address is aenriquez@nelsonhr.com. Further information is also available at www.NelsonJobs.com.
